Title: “UF&Shands Academic Health Center Integrated Data Repository – 2012 Update on i2b2 for Cohort Discovery”

Speaker: Richard Deason, M.S.
Assistant Director and Integrated Data Repository Project Manager, UF&Shands Academic Health Center

Christopher Harle, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor, Department of Health Services Research, Management and Policy, UF&Shands Academic Health Center

Assistant Director Deason and Dr. Harle have disclosed no relevant financial relationships. No one else in a position to control the content of this activity has any financial relationship(s) to disclose.

Learning Objectives: At the conclusion of this presentation, participants should be able to:
1. Recognize the significant impact the UF&Shands Integrated Data Repository (IDR) will have on healthcare quality improvement, patient safety, research and education.
2. Use the examples described in the presentation to understand current and future uses of the IDR and i2b2 to improve their research and quality studies.
3. Gain access to and use the UF&Shands i2b2 software to begin discovering potential cohorts for their current and future research.

If you have access to the i2b2 system prior to the seminar, you will have the option of following the i2b2 examples from your laptop during the presentation. For access, complete the optional, online training module at http://idr.ahc.ufl.edu/i2b2/i2b2-training-module/. After which you may click on the link found and register for access.
